

Three Basic Characteristics of Three Different Subjects

---

Characteristics of Literature

- The very basic thing of literature is to make things interesting by adding literary ornaments. So, literature generally does have that ingredient.
- It doesn't have any time bound, it's time consuming.
- Literature always has the opportunity to comment on any event or issue.

Characteristics of History

- History have to be true, it cannot be painted by false ingredients.
- History deals with past events.
- History is time consuming.

Characteristics of Journalism

- Journalism is basically ornament less, that cannot contain any literary ornament as other form of writing can have.
- It contains nothing except information. Typical journalism has no room for giving more than information, it cannot comment for or against any particular event.
- Journalism has a time bound, that means the whole task has to be finished within a particular time period.